Ditty is a light-hearted programming environment with an open door policy. Every command block users create is immediately available to everyone, no packaging, process, publishing, or pasting required.

It is an experiment in collaborative language design with no formal syntax. Commands are just HTML templates, allowing users to mix-and-match natural language and computer language styles to taste.